LORD MALMESBURY's EMBASSY.

OFFICIAL NOTE.

[FROM LE MERCURE OF THE 28TH INSTANT.]

THE NEGOCIATIONS, scarcely commenced between Lord Malmesbury and the Minister for foreign affairs are already suspended. In the first conference, it was reminded of the English negociator, if he was furnished with powers and instructions from other belligerent powers to stipulate in their name? He answered No—but he added, that when the Directory shall have explained themselves, on the principle laid down in his Memorial (we shall give all the important papers relative to this grand negociation) he would despatch couriers to give an account to the different courts of the state of the negociation, and to receive their orders. It was then asked the Ambassador, if he could not at least specify the principle of the concessions which concern the French Republic and Great Britain? He answered, that after the Directory should have explained itself, he would expedite couriers, and likewise request instructions on this point.

The following is the Memorial of the Ambassador

MEMORIAL

Delivered to the Minister of the French Republic for Foreign Affairs, by Lord Malmesbury.

His Britannic Majesty having, as he has already declared, to contribute, as far as depends on himself, to the speediest healing even of partial inequality, and to ensure by the means of just, honourable, and solid conditions of peace, the future repose of Europe; his Majesty is of opinion, that the best means of attaining, with all possible expedition, that so many end, will be to agree, at the beginning of the negociation, on the general principle which shall serve as a basis for the definitive arrangements.

The first object of the negociation for a peace generally relate to the restitutions and possessions which the respective parties have mutually to demand, in consequence of the war.

Great Britain, after the uninterrupted success of her naval war, finds herself in a situation to have no restitution to demand of France; from which, on the contrary, she has taken effects, colonies and countries of the highest importance, and of a nature almost incalculable.

But, on the other hand, France has made on the continent of Europe, conquests which his Majesty can be the less indifferent, as they affect important interests of his people, and the most sacred engagements of his crown, are essentially implicated therein.

The magnanimity of the King, his inviolable good faith, and his desire to restore repose to so many nations, lead him, in this situation of affairs, to consider the means of procuring terms of peace, just and equitable for all the Belligerent Powers, and calculated to ensure, in future, the general tranquility.

It is on this footing then, that he proposes to negociate by offering to compensate France, by proportionable restitutions, for those arrangements to which she will be called upon to consent, in order to satisfy the just demands of the King's allies, and to preserve the political balance of Europe.

Having made this first overture, his Majesty will, in the sequel, explain himself in a future extensive manner, on the application of the principle to the different objects which may be discussed between the respective parties.

It is this application which will constitute the subject of those discussions into which his Majesty has authorized his Minister to enter; as soon as the principle to be adopted as the general basis of the negociation is known.

But his Majesty cannot dispense with declaring, that if this generous and equitable offer shall not be accepted, or if, unfortunately, the difficulties which may arise, may fail in the defined object, neither this general proposition, nor those more detailed which may result from it, shall be regarded, in any case, as points agreed upon or acceded by his Majesty.

(Signed) MALMESBURY.

Minister Plenipotentiary from his Britannic Majesty.

Paris Oct 24 1796.

REPORT TO THE DIRECTORY.

By the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

The 4th Brumaire. (Oct 25)

The Executive Directory having furnished me with full powers to treat for peace with Great Britain, I had yesterday (3d Brumaire) my first conference with Lord Malmesbury, Plenipotentiary Commissioner of his Britannic Majesty. He presented to me the original of his powers, sealed with the seal of Great Britain, and certified the copy by which he had before presented to me unsigned; and which I had laid before the Directory.

We entered into discussions.—Lord Malmesbury presented to me the memorial which I laid before the Directory. I observed to him that, speaking in the name of the allies of Great-Britain, and negociating for their interests, he was, doubtless, furnished with their powers and instructions. He answered me, that he was not; but that when the Directory should have explained itself upon the principle laid down in his memorial, he would expedite couriers, to give to the different courts an account of the negociations, and to receive their orders. I demanded of him if he could, at least, specify the principle of concession in what concerned the Republic and the government of Great Britain? He replied, that after the Directory should have explained itself, he would send a courier and demand instructions on this point. I then thought it my duty to say to Lord Malmesbury, that I would lay his memorial before the Directory: that I would take its orders, and impart to him its answer.

(Signed) CHA. DELACROIX.

ANSWER OF THE DIRECTORY.

The Executive Directory orders the Minister for Foreign Affairs, to make the following answer to Lord Malmesbury:—

The Executive Directory see with pain, that at the moment when they had reason to hope for the very speedy return of peace between the French Republic and his Britannic Majesty, the proposition of Lord Malmesbury offers nothing but dilatory, or very distant means of bringing the negociation to a conclusion.

The Directory observe, that if Lord Malmesbury would have treated separately, as he was formally authorized by the tenour of his credentials, the negociations might have been considerably abridged; that the necessity of balancing with the interests of the two powers, those of the allies of Great-Britain, multiplies the combinations, encreases the difficulties, tends to the formation of a congress, the forms of which it is known are always tardy, and requires the accession of powers, which hitherto have displayed no desire of accommodation, and have not given to Lord Malmesbury himself, according to his own declaration, any power to stipulate for them.

Thus without prejudging the intentions of Lord Malmesbury; without drawing any conclusion from the circumstance of his declaration not appearing to accord with his credentials; without supposing that he had received any secret instructions which would destroy the effect of his ostensible powers; without pretending, in short, to affirm, that the British government have had a double object in view—to prevent, by general propositions the separate negociations of other powers, and to obtain from the people of England the means of continuing the war, by throwing upon the Republic the odium of a delay occasioned by themselves; the Executive Directory cannot but perceive, that the proposition of Lord Malmesbury is nothing more than a renewal, under more favourable forms, of the propositions made last year by Mr. Wickham: and that it presents but a distant hope of peace.

The Executive Directory further observe, with regard to the principle of conciliation advanced by Lord Malmesbury, that such principle, presented in a vague and isolated manner, cannot receive the basis of negociation; that the first point for consideration are, the common necessity of a speedy and solid peace, the political equilibrium which absolute cessions might destroy, and then the means which the Belligerent powers may possess—the one to retain conquests made at a time when it was supported by a great number of allies, now detached from the coalition, and the other, to recover them at a time when those who were at first its enemies, have almost all either become its allies, or neuter.

Nevertheless, the Executive Directory, animated with an ardent desire of putting a stop to the scourge of war, and to prove that they will not reject any means of reconciliation, declare, that as soon as Lord Malmesbury shall exhibit to the Minister of Foreign Affairs sufficient powers from the allies of Great-Britain, for stipulating for their respective interests, accompanied by a promise on their part to subscribe to whatever shall be concluded in their names, the Executive Directory will give a speedy answer to the new propositions which shall be presented, as far as may be consistent with the safety and dignity of the French Republic. (Signed)

REVELLIERE LEPEAUX President,
LAGARDE, Gen. Secretary.

After receiving this answer, Lord Malmesbury wrote to his court by an extraordinary courier, to obtain the powers required of him, without which it is evident he cannot act. Thus, supposing that the British cabinet have really in view a new Aix-la-Chapelle, and that they are really anxious to take efficacious measures for giving speedy farther action to the Directory, the negociations will at least be suspended for some time.—(Le Messager du Soir.)

BRUSSELS, October 22.

General Bournonville, on account of the want of discipline in his army, has declared, that all those who were to distinguish as to pillage should be shot without mercy.

PARIS, October 31.

Much is said of the immense preparations making for an invasion of England; we must, said Cato, destroy Carthage; we shall never conquer the Romans but in Rome, said Hannibal and Mithridates. Marshal Saxe often repeated, that the English would never be conquered but in London; we think, that if the British Government refuses to accept just conditions of Peace, and if they persist in arming Europe against the Republic, we must carry the war to the banks of the Thames, and force the Government to accept the olive branch. We do not dissemble the multiplied dangers of such an enterprize; success is doubtful; but, perhaps, it is necessary to hazard it, for the repose of Europe, and the glory of the French Republic.

November 2

A private letter from Geneva announces, that the inhabitants of Bâsle, informed of the departure of the English, and that they were making preparations to blow up the fort by two mines, took up arms against them, and detained the Governor as prisoner.

The Dey of Algiers is exerting himself in the most spirited manner to maintain the independence of his ports! The English having intrenched that independence, and taken a Spanish frigate there, the Algerines have reclaimed it! and are preparing their whole maritime force!

November 6.

Citizens Directors,

I hasten to communicate to the Executive Directory the reception of letters from Brest of the 31st ult. (Nov.) brought by an extraordinary Courier, which announce that a General Revolution has just taken place in Ireland.—This interesting news came by two ships brought into the Road the same evening by our privateers, and which latterly sailed from Liverpool. Their Captains state, that the Irish, after taking possession of 30,000 stand of arms in Dublin, attacked and defeated 20,000 English troops; that the Militia joined the Insurgents; and that the whole country is in a state of insurrection. The arrest, and some other arbitrary proceedings of which the English Minister is accused, seemed to have provoked this commotion.

General Bournonville to the Executive Directory,
Mulheim, 3d Brumaire.

I had the honor to give you an account yesterday of the attack of the Army made by the Enemy in the night between the 29th and 30th Vendemaire, on the head of the bridge and the isle of Neuwied; he has projected nothing less than to make the Garrison Prisoners of War and to raze the works, and finally to cut off the communication of the left wing with the right of the Army. This attack cost the Enemy more than 4000 men.

BOURNONVILLE.

LONDON, November 7.

The peasants of the Black Forest have captured, near Rheinfelden, the whole reserve artillery of Moreau's army.

On the 24th ult. the Directory, in a message to the Council of Five Hundred, notified the evacuation of Corsica by the English. Deputies from Bastia and several of the Communes of Corsica, have arrived at Leghorn, to take the oath of fidelity to the Republic; and the Primary Assemblies have met for the purpose of declaring their acceptance of the French Constitution. This message from the Directory was immediately followed by a motion from Lecointre, that the importation and sale of English merchandize in France should be forever prohibited. A debate ensued upon this motion, and that part of it, which related to the prohibition to import English merchandise, was agreed to.

A letter from Vienna says "The French courier, who lately arrived here, was sent by the Directory to General Buonaparte, and by him to our Court. The universal belief is, that he has brought proposals for an armistice and a negociation. General Bournonville, in the letter which he sent to Field Marshal Wurmser to demand a pass, stated, that the early delivery of his message was of the utmost importance. The Emperor, as soon as he heard the object of his mission, gave orders to treat him with the utmost kindness, but no person can visit him without a card of admission from our Minister for Foreign Affairs. This application is made at a time when England, on her side, has sent proposals to France for a negociation, a crime of which the French Government seem desirous to profit.

"The Courier is still in Vienna, and is daily served at dinner with eight, and at supper with six dishes. He has visited the Theatre and other public places but not on foot nor without an escort. Since his arrival, the Emperor has been constantly in Council with the Ministers.

November 10.

Yesterday his Majesty signed an Order in Council, granting Letters of Marque and Reprisals against all ships and vessels belonging to the subjects of the King of Spain. We understand there will be no Counter Declaration on the part of our Court, of the Manifesto of the Court of Madrid, nor indeed does it require any; the reasons assigned in it are too frivolous to need a reply.

November 15.

By one of the Hamburgh Mails was received a private letter from Berlin; it contains the following passages:

"The prospect of a General Peace approaches nearer. His Prussian Majesty, either alarmed at the rapid successes and military prowess of Austria, or apprehensive that Russia (in conjunction with Sweden) will now take a part with the strongest, or from motives of attachment to the Stadtholder and his family remembered, has declined to interfere in the impending negociation at Paris. It is publicly spoken here (Berlin) that instructions are sent to the Prussian Minister at Paris, to intimate to the Directory, that his Majesty is anxious to see Peace restored to Europe; that the offers of the Court of London are equitable; that his Majesty wishes Holland should be no obstacle to the General Treaty, as Great Britain will be ever ready to restore the Dutch property, the Capes and other conquests, as soon as Holland resumes a proper form of government.

"These instructions are said to contain a threat, in case the Directory should refuse to listen to proper terms, that other means must be taken to put a period to the present destructive War."

From here a silence for some days on the subject of Lord Malmesbury's negociation, we hope the happiest conclusion may be drawn, viz. that things are going on in a train which promises fair for a speedy adjustment.

Admiral Richery has to keep clear of three British squadrons—those of Admiral Mann, Thompson, and Curtis. If he gets safe into his own ports, he has what the sailors call "the Devil's luck, and his own too."

The three Hamburgh Mails due since Wednesday last, arrived in Town this Morning. By the letters which they bring, it appears that General Wurmser gained a complete victory over the French at Marmirole, on the 7th ult. The loss of the latter, in the action, was between 4 and 5000 men killed and taken, besides several pieces of cannon, many ammunition waggons, all their magazines, and a military chest.

Letters from Heidelberg of the 27th ult. confirm the accounts of the signal advantages obtained by the Archduke over General Moreau between the 24th and 29th of October. The loss of the Austrians on this occasion was about 2000 men; that of the French was considerably greater, some accounts making it amount to 8000 men. It seems to have been the object of Moreau to raise the siege of Kehl, with a view to secure a retreat over the Rhine at Strasbourgh; but the activity of the Archduke had defeated this scheme; and after several actions, in which he must have sustained very great loss, he was compelled to make good his passage at Hunningen.

November 17

Yesterday an account was received from Dover, stating, that intelligence had been communicated by the Telegraph to Lisle, a few hours before the sailing of a vessel from Calais, that an engagement had taken place between the Austrian General Alvinzy and the French General Massena, on the 20th ult. near Trieste, in which the former were defeated; the French having made about 3000 Croats and a number of Officers prisoners. The cannon and all the baggage of the Austrians also fell into their hands.

From the RHINE.

Kehl was surrounded on the 26th ult. by 15,000 Austrians, and every thing ready to storm that fort at a moment's notice. The attack was only postponed till the Archduke arrived.

The particulars of General Kray's attack on the French at Nieuwid are not detailed; but the loss of the Republicans is stated to exceed that of the Imperialists. Since that time both armies have been reinforced.

Some of the foreign prints we have perused speak of the defeat of Moreau's army to be complete—nay, some state it to be annihilated—and that it is not in the power of the French Government to re-organize their three great armies.

HAGUE, October 20.

The day before yesterday a letter was read in the Convention from Batavia, stating that the English had taken all our settlements in the East-Indies, except Batavia and two settlements in Java.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29.

Yesterday, at 12 o'clock, a deputation from the Grand Lodge of the ancient and honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons in Pennsylvania, waited on the President of the United States, when the following Address was delivered to him by the Grand Master:

To GEORGE WASHINGTON,
President of the United States.

The Address of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania.

Most respected Sir and Brother,

Having announced your intention to retire from public labour to that refreshment to which your pre-eminent services, for near half a century, have so justly entitled you, permit the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, at this last Feast of our Evangelic Master St. John, on which we can hope for an immediate communication with you, to join the grateful voice of our country in acknowledging that you have carried forth the principles of the Lodge into every walk of your life by your constant labours for the prosperity of that country; by your unremitting endeavours to promote order, union and brotherly affection amongst us; and lastly, by the vows of your farewell address to your brethren and fellow-citizens—an address which, we trust, our children's children will ever look upon as a most invaluable legacy from a Friend, a Benefactor and a Father.

To these our grateful acknowledgments (leaving to the impartial pen of History to record the important events in which you have borne so illustrious a part) permit us to add our most fervent prayers, that, after enjoying, to the utmost span of human life, every felicity which the Terrestrial Lodge can afford, you may be received by the Great Master Builder of this World, and of Worlds unnumbered, into the ample fellowship of that celestial Lodge, in which alone distinguished virtues and distinguished labours can be eternally rewarded.

By the unanimous order of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania,
WM. MOORE SMITH, G. M.
December 27th, A. L. 5796.

To which the President was pleased to reply

Fellow Citizens and Brothers of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania,

I HAVE received your address with all the feelings of brotherly affection, mingled with those sentiments for the Society which it was calculated to excite.

To have been in any degree an instrument, in the hands of Providence, to promote order and peace, upon a solid foundation, the true principles of government, in a labour, the result of which, we us hope, will prove, through all ages, a Sanctuary for Brothers and a Lodge for the Virtues.

Permit me to reciprocate your prayers for my temporal happiness, and to supplicate that we may all meet hereafter, in that eternal Temple, whose Builder is the Great Architect of the Universe.

G. WASHINGTON.

NEW-YORK, January, 2.

Extract of a letter from Baltimore, dated Dec. 27.

"Capt. Barkey has arrived at Norfolk, with two frigates, and is himself at Baltimore, and publicly declares, he has received orders from the Directory to capture all American vessels bound to and from English ports, either in Europe or elsewhere."

The north river is frozen over, so as to render it passable on the ice—a circumstance which has not been experienced here for some years before.

NEW-LONDON, January 5.

A Paris Journal of the 10th November, has the following article:

"We are assured that Lord Malmesbury has made to the Directory the proposal for an armistice between England and France."

On the Lower Rhine the Austrians made, on the 22d ult. a bold, but unsuccessful attempt to render themselves masters of the bridge-head near Neuwied, and to cut off the communication between the right and left wings of the French army. Their loss appears to have been very considerable on this occasion; and the French, under Bournonville, maintained their position. If we are to admit the French account, they made 1000 prisoners, 400 of whom were wounded; and the affair, on the whole, cost the Austrians, 4000 men.

"It is reported, that there has been concluded between Spain and Portugal, a Convention, stating, that all the ports of the latter are to be shut against the English during the war."

From Italy it appears, that Mantua still holds out. General Wurmser has lately made several ineffectual sorties, and the surrender of the garrison is very shortly expected to take place.

Moreau has requested of the Directory, that Pichegru may be appointed to command the army of the Rhine and the Moselle.

In a letter to the Directory, Gen. Moreau states, that on the 8th of October, (27th Vendemaire) his right wing was attacked in the passes of Holt, St. Petre, and St. Mergen; but they were defended. On the 19th, Prince Charles made a fresh attack; the French General Beaupuis was killed; Moreau preserved his position; killed 500 Austrians, and took 130 prisoners. The two armies were engaged every day; without much loss on either side from the 13th to the 25th, when Moreau took post at Attinger, and the next day passed the Rhine at Neuenguen; and altho' the Austrians were encamped but a league distant, they did not molest his passage.

President Washington's Address on his Resignation, is published in the London and Liverpool papers.

German accounts say, that the French, in their retreat through Suabia, destroyed above forty villages by fire!

The fundamental plan of the new Constitution of the Batavian Republic, has been agreed upon by the Committee appointed to frame the same; one only dissenting. The Legislative Body is divided into two Councils; one to consist of 30, and the other of 60 members. The organization is almost similar to that of France.

A Dutch fleet despatched from Holland, for the purpose of retaking the Cape of Good-Hope, were all captured on the 17th of August, at anchor in Saldanha-Bay. ——The Dutch squadron consisted of two ships of 68 guns, one 54, one 44, one 36, one 28, one 26, one 18, and a store-ship; commanded by Rear-Admiral Lucas. They appear to have been weakly manned, the ships of the line having less than 450 seamen and troops, and the others in proportion. The British fleet which captured them, consisted of seven ships of the line, a 50, and several of smaller force, commanded by Admiral Elphinstone. The Dutch Admiral surrendered by capitulation, without firing a gun.

The King of Sardinia is dead. The Prince of Piedmont succeeds him.

Admiral Richery was spoken with Nov. 28 in the Bay of Biscay, by a Danish ship.

The fear of a French invasion, rather increases in England; and the Ministry endeavour to promote the alarm.

The Swedish Ambassador has left Paris, and arrived in England.
